Bone health can be dependent on many factors including heredity, diet, exercise and lifestyle. Calcium is a primary mineral responsible not only for strong bones, but supporting proper muscle contraction and nerve function.* A diet lacking in Calcium has been linked with a variety of bone-related health issues.* Because our body cannot produce this essential mineral, supplementing with Calcium along with key supportive nutrients including the antioxidant Vitamin C, bone-friendly Vitamin D, and minerals such as Magnesium and Zinc, work together to promote optimum bone wellness.*
