Loquat Leaf: Loquat is a type of fruit tree that grows in the tropics and subtropic. It contains malic acid, tartaric acid, citric acid, tannate, carotene, vitamins A, B and C.

Licorice: It is a flavorful herb that has been used in food and medicinal remedies for thousands of years. This herb has long been valued as a demulcent (soothing, coating agent) and expectorant (rids phlegm and mucous from the respiratory tract).

Salvia Root: The root itself is a hardy perennial that is part of the mint family. The salvia root is the portion that is set aside as one of the most potent medicinal herbs.
