Ubiquinol is the reduced and active form of Coenzyme Q10 (CoQ10) and has been shown to be easily absorbed and readily utilized by the body. The highest concentrations of CoQ10 are found in the heart, where constant energy availability is critical. CoQ10 is essential to mitochondrial energy production and functions as a powerful, fat soluble, free radical scavenger, providing protection for all tissues.* Certain research publications indicate that Ubiquinol may help support the following:
