Know Your Greens everRAW

While there are many greens powders available the majority of them fall short. The #1 problem with most 'greens' products is the way the ingredients are dried. Most greens out there are drum dried or air dried, sometimes even at high temperatures to speed up the process. These drying methods cause the greens to lose tons of micronutrient potential, but manufacturers love them because it reduces the bitter flavor (you know, the taste caused by the health-benefiting micronutrients) and they are cheap. If the product doesn't specifically state its superior drying process, it's because they are dried using cheap methods. As you will see, all of our greens are either freeze-dried or use the EverRAW® or MicroDried® process to maintain ultimate micronutrient content. This way your greens actually have the function of...greens!

Concentrated Superfoods

What truly makes superfoods "super" is their rich makeup of different micronutrients. Micronutrients include things like common vitamins and minerals, but more-so specific antioxidants and cofactors you have never heard of. In order to provide a wide variety of micronutrients in every serving, we chose specific extracts of fruits, mushrooms, and turmeric. Both of these blends use specific extracts and concentrates in order to get more of the key micronutrient in a small serving size. Think of it like drinking an espresso over traditional dripped coffee. A small shot of espresso delivers as much caffeine as 2 cups of regular coffee. We bring the same concept here, just focused on micronutrients for antioxidant and immune support, coming from key fruits and mushrooms, complimenting the greens.
