L-Carnitine is synthesized in the body from the amino acids lysine and methionin. Regardless of what your bodybuilding and fitness goals are, losing fat or gaining muscle, your chances of success will increase greatly if you have L-Carnitine in your supplement arsenal. Studies focusing on how carnitine works have been done as far back as 1937.

If you are looking to get lean, then this is the amino acid you need. L-Carnitine transfers long-chain fatty acids, such as triglycerides into mitochondria, where they may be oxidized to produce energy. Carnitine has also been shown to reduce fatigue and serve as an appetite suppressant as well. Therefore, L-Carnitine would be a major asset to have in your arsenal when you are dieting. It not only will help keep your body from storing fat, but it will increase your aerobic capacity to help you burn more calories.
