Discussion: Flax seeds provide several important nutrients such as essential fats, enzymes, vitamins, and trace amounts of the naturally-occurring minerals potassium, calcium and iron. The body does not completely absorb many of these nutrients from ordinary flax because whole seeds are difficult to digest. Milling flax seed helps improve digestibility, but sprouting - the natural process of germination - is the best way to obtain the fullest nutritional potential of flax.

In Sprouted FiProFLAX™, increased energy and nourishment bursts from each sprouted flax seed. The germination process enables enhanced digestibility and bioavailability, making Sprouted FiProFLAX™ the ultimate flax seed nutritional supplement.

A serving of Sprouted FiProFLAX™ typically contains:

- 3,600 mg Alpha-Linolenic Acid (omega-3)
- 900 mg Linoleic Acid (omega-6)
- 195 mg Lignans

Sprouted FiProFLAX™ can be eaten alone, sprinkled on cereal, yogurt or other foods, mixed in juice or used in baking. Experience the Next Generation of Flax™ with Sprouted FiProFLAX™.

Rigorously quality tested to guarantee purity, potency and truth-in-labeling.
