Andrew Lessman's LUTEIN-10 provides high levels of Lutein, which is a powerful, natural anti-oxidant carotenoid. Lutein is a "colorful" anti-oxidant principally found in the healthiest of yellow and green leafy vegetables. Lutein is most well known for its protective role in eye health where it has been shown to play a central role in protecting the lens of the eye and macular region of the retina from oxidative damage. Studies have shown that Lutein is particularly effective at protecting delicate eye tissues from the oxidative damage caused by ultraviolet (UV) radiation in sunlight, along with the normal effects of the aging process on healthy eye function. Research has also shown that Lutein can block harmful blue light from reaching vulnerable eye tissues and, not surprisingly, diets rich in Lutein are associated with superior long-term eye health. Lutein has also been shown to be concentrated in a wide variety of lipid-based tissues and structures in the body, including male and female reproductive organs and breast tissue, thereby protecting these delicate structures from oxidative damage. Lutein cannot be made by the body, so it can only play a beneficial role if consumed in foods or in nutritional supplements. Sadly, most Americans consume very little Lutein because of our low consumption of fruits and vegetables, and what little we do manage to consume is readily depleted through sun exposure, ultraviolet (UV) radiation and aging. Consistent with the research on Lutein, our formula provides levels many times higher than the leading multivitamins in order to ensure the greatest opportunity to achieve Lutein's well-researched benefits.
