*Oxygen Radical Absorbance Capacity (ORAC) is equivalent to 1 - 2 servings of fruits and vegetables.

Acai (pronounced Ah...sah...ee) Acai Palm grows in tropical Central and South America, mainly in floodplains and wetlands. The Acai Palm produces a crop of berries twice per year. The fruits deteriorate rapidly after harvest, so outside the tree's growing region the fruit is generally only available as juice or fruit pulp that has been frozen or dried, preserving the high ORAC antioxidant value of the acai fruit.

Low temperature dried acai powder is naturally rich in fiber, healthy fats, protein and organic vitamins and minerals, especially Vitamin C and Potassium. To Go Brands acai antioxidant power is preserved by a patented Infrared Low Temperature (ILT) process. The dense pigmentation of acai is from its high antioxidant phytonutrients (flavonoid polyphenols) that give the berries their deep color. Unlike most other berries, the antioxidant power of acai quenched both water soluble and fat soluble free radicals. In addition, antioxidant testing of properly dried acai powder shows both an extremely high and a long lasting antioxidant effect.

*ORAC, short for Oxygen Radical Absorbance Capacity, measures the total Antioxidant Power of foods. Antioxidants disarm free radicals. These free radicals harm healthy cells, accelerating aging throughout the body. The more free radicals a food can absorb the higher the Antioxidant Power and ORAC score. The acceptable precision of an ORAC assay is 15% relative standard deviation.
