Biotin, a B vitamin long used to aid in metabolism and support healthy hair, skin and nails, has recently been discovered to be beneficial for blood glucose already within normal range.[†] Recent research has shown that biotin, when used in high doses such as the amount found in Biotin 5,000 mcg, can help promote glucose uptake in muscle tissue.[†] It can also help to potentiate the glucose supporting properties of the mineral chromium picolinate.[†]
